

MONDERO Jairo B.

BSIT 2-5

REAL SELF VS IDEAL SELF

My real self today is just a simple guy, I have toned body but not so buff and I'm 5'6. Also I have braces because my teeth is not perfect that's why my braces is turning 7 years but it is always clean. My skin is not that smooth because I have a skin condition which is skin asthma I have this kind of condition since birth and my cure in this condition is just to moisture my skin with lotion everyday. My real self loves to play online games and basketball but because of my study I cannot play anymore and also because of my motorcycle. All of my money goes to my motorcycle and I build or design my motorcycle myself that's why majority of my time goes to academics and my motorcycle because when fixing my motorcycle needs time and effort to make it presentable and Thailand inspired motorcycle that's why it is not easy to think of many ideas in designing my motorcycle. My real self is also trying to find ways to earn money instead of putting all the money in the motorcycle so that I can help my parents financially and to give back from all of their expenses when I was studying in a private school. My body right now is not that buff not just like the previous because I don't have any time in dieting and workouts because I cannot focus on my study because of the strict diet but I maintain the toned body so that I will not look chubby. There are so much flaws that I really want to talk about but that is some of my real self today that I always take care of.

My ideal self is to be settled in everything having complete resources counting many money everyday and earning six digits everyday. My ideal physical appearance is that I want to be tall enough maybe 6'1 because my mother side have tall genes I don't know why I have this kind of height. And I want to remove this skin condition even though it looks impossible because we have this in our family genes so that I will not itch every time the weather is hot and it is not itchy when I eat seafoods or fish. My ideal self is having a big bike and other collectible motorcycle in Japan so that it is satisfying when I look at them in my garage and the value of it will increase as it gets old. And finally my ideal self wants to give my parents all there needs so that they will not struggle in everything and I want to give that ideal self as soon as possible that's why the real self always study hard and always think of many ways on how to learn each and every day in order to succeed in the future and give them my ideal self